HalogenPC Unveils Powerful Line of Performance Computers

Halogen Performance Computers is excited to introduce their line of high-performance machines to the masses with the launch of their website www.halogenpc.com

/24-7PressRelease/ - November 13, 2007 - Halogen Performance Computers ("HalogenPC") unveils their high-end computers to the masses with the launch of their website www.halogenpc.com. The custom computer company based in Wilmington, Delaware is excited to introduce their line of high-performance machines tailored to both gaming enthusiasts and power users. HalogenPC seeks to satisfy the high-end computer market by providing computers that push the performance threshold. A unique feature is the company's use of a proprietary liquid-cooling system. This system allows the computers to cope with additional heat and run at speeds much faster than those of competing firms. In addition to increased performance, Halogen computers feature an array of exotic paint jobs, making them as attractive as they are powerful. In addition to its popular gaming machines, the company also offers fully-customized workstations as well as performance-oriented personal computers.

HalogenPC's innovative website allows consumers to customize nearly every aspect of their computer. The functional interface guides each customer through the build process and allows them to save their "dream machines" to a cart for later modification. HalogenPC's choice of premium hardware assures the customer of a quality build each and every time. Qualified technicians hand-assemble the machines and perform various stress tests to insure the computers reach their peak performance. Depending on options, finish, and quantity of orders, the average Halogen computer is built and shipped to your doorstep within 17-25 days.

The Halogen team will continue to push the boundaries of personal computers by incorporating new and emerging technology into their machines. HalogenPC's goal is to provide the demanding professional and enthusiast with a superior computing experience.
