Cambridge Who's Who Recognizes Monique Forsey for Expertise in Computer Programming Services

Monique Forsey, owner of Forsey Computing Services, has been honored for entrepreneurship in information technology and computer science.

/Cambridge Who's Who/ - Northford, CT, March 16, 2008, Monique Forsey, owner of Forsey Computing Services, has been honored by Cambridge Who's Who for entrepreneurship in information technology and computer science.

Growing up, Ms. Forsey was raised to fix things for herself when they broke. Because of this, she developed a knack for repairing computers. Forsey Computing Services handles all aspects of technology services including repairs, program issues, networking problems, desktop support for Windows 98, ME, 2000, XP and Vista, troubleshooting hardware and software, removal of viruses, and Spyware and Malware. Recently, the company has acquired an ability to support all educational initiatives such as McGraw Hill's Break Through to Literacy and the Scholastic Read 180 Program.

Ms. Forsey's daily responsibilities include maintaining support for educational programs. She attributes her success to her love for her profession and self-confidence. Ms. Forsey has an associate of science in computer repair programs from Sir Sanford Fleming College and has numerous certifications including Microsoft Professional, IBM Professional, Compaq Professional, Hardware Provider Programming, Dell Professional, Gateway, A+, Novell Networking, and Windows Networking.
