Mystic Management Systems Sees Expansion for Document Control Into Europe

Weakened dollar, growth in key European industries, and need to have quality documents controlled are boon to U.S. solution providers like Mystic Management Systems, Inc.

/24-7PressRelease/ - NORWICH, CT, March 21, 2008 — Mystic Management Systems, a leading provider of web based document control and quality management systems for twenty-five years, sees an expanding market for document control software in Europe. The weakened U.S. dollar and the growth of European industries make a great opportunity for software companies that provide document control.

The European Economy is shaking off its modest growth slumber and poising for an explosive expansion. The inexpensive labor, resources, goods, and services of Asia and now the United States, are ripe for Europe's industrial leaders. Simply put, these industry leaders can take advantage of a strong European Currency to obtain solutions that will provide deeper costs reductions and greater profits. One of those areas that can generate a tremendous amount of costs is poor quality and document control. Both usually go together.

American companies, like Mystic Management Systems, are ready to help their European industries with exceptional customer service, intuitive configurable global solutions, and an immediate return on their investment. European companies will experience a deep discount from the exchange rate when shopping for and obtaining a document control solution. With more interest rate cuts expected that will only continue to drive the exchange rate further down for the dollar. Just like tourists purchasing cheaper iPods and similar consumer goods, European companies have that same luxury when making IT investments. Their quality standards and documentation will improve while their ability to maneuver through the complex regulations of their respective industries will become nimble. European industry leaders will have state of the art quality in the goods delivered to them that only U.S. companies can provide.

"The EC requires signatures, documents, and more when it comes to creating goods. Add on top of that the regulation of the United States, foreign governments, and other recognized standards like ISO. As an owner and businessman I am always in search of tools that can reduce my overhead and increase my profit. I search for this while making the quality of my services the best compared to my competition," stated Peter Barth, PhD., private investor and former owner of Olympic GmbH, Munich, Germany. "When looking for an affordable quality solution for my document control needs, the U.S. is my first choice. Who knows how long this will last."

"While no one can predict the future, there will always be regulations, documentation, and quality. Global consumers are fickle when it comes to poor quality. This is true no matter where in the world you are. European companies, like Airbus, Volkswagen, and Boehringer-Ingelheim recognize this as an imperative for their customers. They have decided to invest in solutions that will keep their quality high, costs down, and pass those savings to their customers," stated Nelson N. Martin of Wenatchee Valley College, Wenatchee, Washington. "Document control just happens to be a very important solution."
