The Popular-Selling Book, Living The Secret Everyday Becomes Parents' Choice for Raising Children

Author-Educator Presents a Plan for Raising Children Beginning with Creating a Home Environment that Empowers Children to be Happy, Giving and Productive.

/24-7PressRelease/ - LOS ANGELES, CA, April 12, 2008 - The popular selling book, Living The Secret Everyday: My Secret Workbook by Joanne Scaglione and Suzanne Stitz, has become the widespread choice of parents as the tool to raise happy, empowered and giving children. Growing sales show that the workbook has been embraced by parents as the guide to teach their children about living joyfully.

Author-Educator, Dr. Joanne Scaglione, a coach and mentor to children, parents and teachers for 30 years, says, "Raising empowered and joyful children starts with setting an example. As parents we have the capacity to help our children reach their limitless potential through choices we make in our parenting roles. You cannot parent your children until you learn to parent yourself." Parents are the role models (of both their good and bad behavior) for their children. Research is clear that children are more likely to do as their parents do rather than what they say. The key is to consciously parent- be mindful and aware of the impact our actions have on our children so that we can guide them in a way that empowers them to be true to themselves and make a difference in the world."

Living The Secret Everyday: My Secret Workbook sets forth step-by-step how to become that joyful and positive role model that children will emulate. It teaches parents how to create that positive, warm and loving environment and how to lead children on a life journey filled with joy. In short, it is about how to become parents that empower kids to be, do, and have all they want and become loving, giving and productive citizens.
