POWER TAX RELIEF FIGHTS FOR INJURED ARMY VETERAN

Military Enlisted Man Serving in Iraq saves $132,000 in IRS debt with the help of Power Tax Relief, the front-runner in tax debt arbitration; United States Army Reserve Veteran Michael Zaunetti reduced his debt of $150,000 down to an astonishing $18,000.

/24-7PressRelease/ - LOS ANGELES, CA, April 23, 2008 - With the help of Power Tax Relief, the front-runner in tax debt arbitration; United States Army Reserve Veteran Michael Zaunetti reduced his debt of $150,000 down to an astonishing $18,000. Zaunetti found himself in a complicated situation and never thought that his own country would let him down, but little did he know relief was just around the corner. Power Tax Relief is known for its substantial assistance with military personnel and understands the unique circumstances that they encounter.

"After serving in Iraq and Kuwait, I became injured and was sent home," said Zaunetti. "I was informed that the Army weren't concerned with soldiers who had left the service, so when I tried to handle my debt, they were no help at all. Luckily, a friend who is a part time IRS agent referred me to Power Tax Relief and they assisted me with getting my problem resolved."

Power Tax Relief is not only comprised of tax specialists that are trained in dealing with complicated IRS circumstances, they care about their customers and want the best outcome in every situation. Power Tax Relief prides itself in helping customers reach their ideal tax resolution. Situations like Michael's are more common than people think, but with the assistance of PTR, tax debt can be banished forever.

"Not only were the experts at Power Tax Relief really friendly, but they were knowledgeable and able to explain the situations to me in a clear and concise manner," said Zaunetti. "They also brought up a couple other years that were a problem for me and helped me solve them as well. I realized that I did not have to fight this alone and there are good organizations like Power Tax Relief to help in a time of financial crisis."
