The Right One/Together Dating Acquires Top Tier Internet Dating Service

Two dating service leaders are marrying. The Right One and Together Dating, a traditional, brick and mortar matchmaking company with 60 locations in the USA, has acquired the internet dating service LoveAccess.com.

/24-7PressRelease/ - BOSTON, MA, May 01, 2008 - The man who has married more couples than any other matchmaker, has met his own match with a new addition to his company. Paul A. Falzone, CEO of The Right One and Together Dating, has added online dating service LoveAccess.com to his family of companies.

"Our business is happiness, and this new service enables us to spread the joys of love and marriage to a much wider audience," said Falzone.

The new online service will offer greater safety and security than other online services to those who want to meet other singles. Every member of the site will receive a phone call to confirm both their single status and the facts presented in their profiles. A VIP membership will also allow for certifications of the memberships, so that potential dates know they have been cleared with background checks.

Mark Brooks, analyst and consultant to the online dating industry and editor of Online Personals Watch, commented, "Match tried matchmaking, now the matchmakers are responding. The matchmakers at The Right One / Together Dating have the real world experience, and Nelson Rodriguez and the team at LoveAccess.com have the online marketing savvy to meld this combination of companies into a highly effective marketing powerhouse."

Nelson Rodriguez, current CEO of LoveAccess, will remain with the company in an executive position. The Right One and Together Dating and LoveAccess.com will be headquartered in Norwell, MA.
