Drug Addiction Hotline Unveiled At Online Resource

The troubles and hardships addicts face can now be remedied through an Internet connection and telephone line.

/24-7PressRelease/ - NORTH MIAMI BEACH, FL, May 09, 2008 - A respect leader in drug addiction, DrugTreatments.com, has created a new hotline service to help cater to the troubles that drug addicts face.

The new hotline can be reached at all hours of the day, in which case drug addicts from around the world can seek help with just a telephone and a few minutes of spare time. It is hoped that with this new hotline enabled, drug addicts will call for help instead of resorting to old habits that get them into trouble.

The hotline isn't the only way to get help, however. The resource at DrugTreatments.com also offers an online assistance contact form, just in case drug addicts do not have a telephone line to use in order to get help. Using this contact form, drug addicts can still seek help, yet only are required to have an Internet connection.

The hotline and contact form are both being used in conjunction to help rid the world of drug addiction. In the future, the resource at DrugTreatments.com will seek to expand their functionality to further increase their reach to drug addicts who may be able to change their ways through simple communication to those who can help best.

About DrugTreatments.com:

DrugTreatments.com was established in order to give drug addicts a common source to seek help via telephone and Internet access. It hopes to expand its helpful resources to anyone looking for it, and continues to expand their services where applicable.
