Explore Italy on your own two feet with Intrepid Travel.

/24-7PressRelease/ - BOULDER, CO, July 18, 2008 - Intrepid Travel announces the addition of two new self guided walking tours through Italy, one the length of the Cinque Terra and the second, along the Amalfi Coast.

Walkers on the new self guided tour through the Cinque Terra will walk from picturesque Bonassola to the promontory village of Portovenere. They will stroll along one of the finest coastal paths in Europe, and will visit the pretty pastel fishing villages along the way. Travelers will make for the hills and enjoy the perfect panoramas as well as the excellent seafood and renowned wines from the terraced vineyards of the coast.

Cinque Terra Self Guided Walk

The famous coastal path of the Cinque Terre offers breathtaking panoramas of the coast and the colorful painted houses that make up the 'five lands'. The area is famous for its seafood and for the produce of the steep hillsides - wine, olives and basil. Try the pesto, which is the local specialty - it's fabulous! Trips start at 5 days for $895.

Travelers then descend by the footpath known as the Via dell' Amore to San Gennaro church, and to the center of the delightful fishing village of Vettica Maggiore.

Take the circular walk from idyllic Ravello down the ancient trail to the pretty whitewashed fishing village of Atrani. Head slowly down through little hamlets, meadows and shady woods and waterfalls to the historic town of Amalfi. Its medieval architecture, sea views and local crafts are justly renowned. 8 days for $1700. <http://www.intrepidtravel.com/trips/ZAM>
