

Press Release Contact Information:

Paul Greenway
PWG Media producer
P O Box 27482
Austin, TX
United States, 78755
Voice: 512-346-0009
E-Mail: Email us Here
Website: Visit Our Website

High gas costs may interfere with teenagers getting enough behind the wheel instruction.

Parents can save as much as $180 by sending teenagers on an instructional drive on REAL ROADS, On-Line, without the high cost of gas, stress.

/24-7PressRelease/ - AUSTIN, TX, July 19, 2008 - "It would take me weeks and who knows how many gallons of gas to drive my teenagers through all the scenarios at teenlivedrive.com, says Bernice Smith, a mother of three teenagers in St Louis, Missouri. "It's a real savings to have them ride on real roads online, before I fill up the tank and get in the car with them, I look at it as a great head start."

Teenagers watch real life driving situations on real roads while listening to a professional driving instructor talk about the traffic and approaching situations, In real time.

A new website, www.teenlivedrive.com, allows teenagers to download video files that play on iPods, iPhones, iTunes and in QuickTime on desktops and laptops, or get a DVD.

"Most schools don't teach behind the wheel anymore, says Jim Grimm, driving instructor and coach at Reagan High School in Austin, Texas. "I think an in-the-car instructor is best, still an in-the-car instructor online is great, since many kids wind up tuning out a parent."

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reports that car crashes are the leading cause of death among teens, nearly 6000 every year and some 300,000 injured.

NHTSA promotes a graduated driver licensing system, where young drivers satisfy staggered requirements before full driving privileges, a system that has shown a reduction in crashes.

"I know that this video instruction is the next best thing to actually driving with a parent ", says Paul Greenway, producer of the video content. "Teenagers most definitely need to get behind the wheel, and www.teenlivedrive.com offers the best preparation I know of."

"All subjects in school are important but in a way I think drivers education is most important ", says Grimm. "I mean not being able to add can't kill you, not knowing what to do behind the wheel can be lethal."

About www.teenlivedrive.com.

Teen Live Drive offers real life road driving on the web and posts links to driver test manuals in each state. The site is produced by PWG Media, an Austin, Texas based video/digital media Production Company.

For more information please visit www.teenlivedrive.com or www.pwgmedia.com.

Please call 1-512-346-0009

Contact:

Paul Greenway

512-346-0009

paul.greenway@teenlivedrive.com

About PWG Media

PWG Media is a video production studio that offers advertising, web and public relations services.