Get to Know your Animal by Talking to Them

Many Americans are pet owners and when we invite one of these loving animals into our lives, we all hope that we can open the lines of communication between animal and humans.

/24-7PressRelease/ - CAVE CREEK, AZ, July 24, 2008 - Many Americans are pet owners and when we invite one of these loving animals into our lives, we all hope that we can open the lines of communication between animal and humans. Sometimes it's hard but Debbie Johnstone a Phoenix based Animal Communicator wants to bring animals and the people that love them closer together through communication. She believes that animals are not just our pets but are our family members, our companions and our friends.

Once a member of the corporate world, Debbie saw the need to return to what she truly loved as a child, animals. She now spends her time further developing her animal communication and healing abilities while working full time helping animals and people communicate with each other as well as volunteers at Arizona Equine Rescue Organization a local non-profit. Debbie is also a practitioner of Master Energy Medicine a powerful energy healing technique that assists in emotional, mental and physical healing.

As a part of her services offered at her business, Listen2Animals, Debbie can assist you and your animal companion with health questions or concerns, desires for comfort and contentment, puzzling or challenging behavior and all aspects of your relationship. If you are not in the Phoenix area, you too can benefit from her services as animal communication consultations are available through e-mail or telephone because Debbie receives information just as strongly whether she is with your animal in person or if she connects from a distance.

Debbie Johnstone loves her choice of career and shows her passion when she stated, "It is my highest desire to help people understand their animal companions better and to enhance their relationship. I can assist by helping people understand why an animal's behavior has changed, how they are feeling during illness or stressful situations, their wishes in respect to death or dying or medical treatment, challenging behavior and what they love most about being with us".

As for her future goals as it relates to Listen2Animals, she further states, "I'm working on an animal communication class that will teach people how to communicate with their own animals, whether they are alive in physical form or if they are in spirit. I want people to learn what their animals want to ask, tell and teach them. I want people to understand that getting in touch with their own inner guidance system or their own intuition is all that is needed to connect to their animal companions".
