TECHNITRADER RELEASES FREE WEB LESSON ABOUT US FINANCIAL CRISIS

Tells people how to protect their retirement savings and investments

SEATTLE, WA, October 03, 2008 /24-7PressRelease/ -- Martha Stokes CMT and CEO of TechniTrader , a stock market education company, has released a free web lesson explaining the current banking crisis. The web lesson places the crisis in perspective for traders or those who are interested in what is really going on with the stock market and economy as a whole.

Martha Stokes, popular lecturer and author, is one of the under 800 people worldwide to have earned the Chartered Market Technician (CMT) certification. A Chartered Market Technician is a professional certification for technical analysts administered by the Market Technicians Association. It is the ONLY certification for technical analysts approved and recognized by the SEC, NYSE and NASDAQ. Martha won her CMT certification after dedicating five years of extensive research and analysis in writing her doctoral equivalent thesis titled "Cycle Evolution Theory: How to Identify Evolutionary Abnormal Cycle Patterns using Technical Analysis". Martha is also a regular contributor to Stocks & Commodities Magazine.

To view the free web lesson, visit www.technitrader.com/talkingfrankly. This lesson discusses the different types of money used in the economy (M0 - M3 money) and how people can protect their retirement savings and current investments.
