BOTANY, AUSTRALIA, October 11, 2008 /24-7PressRelease/ -- RISING the well-known security product manufacturer announces that RISING Antivirus won VB100 award in October, the second time in a row, after the VB100 award of August 2008.

The representatives of Virus Bulletin and VB100 Award say: "As the virus threat is continually changing, you should look for products that have achieved a succession of VB100 awards, rather than just one or two. About Virus Bulletins and VB100 award

Virus Bulletin started in 1989 as a magazine dedicated to providing PC users a regular source of intelligence about computer viruses, their prevention, detection and removal, and how to recover programs and data following an attack. Virus Bulletin's aim is to offer readers the best impartial advice about anti-virus security and the products on offer.

For many years, Virus Bulletin has carried out independent comparative testing of anti-virus products. Indeed, Virus Bulletin's tests are widely recognized within the industry. The tests tend to focus on virus detection rates and scanning speed, as well as looking at how each product fares when scanning a set file that are known to be clean.

The VB100 award was first introduced in 1998. In order to display the VB100 logo, an anti-virus product must have demonstrated in our tests that: it detects all In the Wild viruses during both on-demand and on-access scanning; it generates no false positives when scanning a set of clean files; The product must fulfill these criteria in its default state.

About Windows Server 2008 platform

Windows Server 2008 platform shares a code base with Vista, with many tweaks and improvements in a variety of areas, but sensibly avoiding the rather showy and resource-hungry cosmetic adjustments which most users will identify with the new breed of Windows systems.
