Corporate Women are Plugging in - to Inner Sources of Wealth

Tanya D. Holland is helping women plug in via workshops and speaking engagements focusing on their inner strength, feminine energy, positive assessment and belief in themselves, their families, their relationships, and life.

SARASOTA, FL, October 16, 2008 /24-7PressRelease/ -- People have stopped Tanya for years to tell her that her energy is remarkable; her smile is infectious; her compassion is admirable. She educated herself through: international work and studies since age 19; mentors who are married, content, successful, and respond with integrity; 7 years of formal education; 1000s of business, communication, relationship, sales, and psychology books; a health regime of fitness and yoga; a business acumen of identifying corporate processes and improvements; and asking 100s of questions from anyone and everyone. She is an international marketing and strategy analyst for destination resort developers and international banks and has successfully worked in law, development, building, recruitment, international trade, sales, marketing, and in earlier years - interior design.

Tanya now shares knowledge, wisdom, successes, and speed bumps over the twists and turns of the corporate world with corporate women internationally - with an understanding of what it takes to juggle feminine energy, high standards, severe personal tragedies, over-abundance of demands from work, almost giving up, and yet determined to focus on dreams and her relationship. The world of power, the world of layoffs, the world of doors opening and closing, the world of excessive money and no money...and "Her World"...one of inner wealth - of strength, belief, foundation, and values no matter what events are transpiring.

She's been Stopped - on the street of St. Lucia; in a coffee shop in England; on the Shinkansen in Japan; at the Golf and Country Club in Barbados; in an international bank in Germany; while running the Pikes Peak Marathon in Colorado; at a lace shop in Bruges, Belgium; at the International Court of Justice in Luxembourg; at an international trade event in Ft. Lauderdale; at a posh work-out club in Portland, OR; on an upside down ride in North Carolina...stopped and asked what makes her so happy and energetic...Her answer is always the same...choice.

Tanya writes business analysis and creative articles and trains, speaks, and re-aligns herself. She is a mentor and trainer and is propelling women to integrate who they are in what they do without losing themselves, their relationships, or their beliefs. "Plug in to inner sources of Wealth without losing yourself," she states. "It's not just that opportunity knocks, we must knock at the door of opportunity." She further adds, "The Law of Attraction invites Action - if we choose it."
