The American Music Show, released by American Windsong Music, is deeply rooted in the traditions of American music, from country ballads to down and dirty blues; cool jazz to folk- and gospel-inspired tunes. Each song is a witness to the struggles and joys of life, sung with such heart that you know the artist has been there; done that.

Robert Cowan, the "Harmonica Man," as longtime harp player for the Neville Brothers, says of the album: "It is a priceless example of what song writing in an Americana set of styles can be! A new set of classics. It was a real honor to be invited to play with all of these gifted talents."
